

Sprint #2 End Report Share Yourself Artists Team 2 11/4/18

Actions to Stop Doing

We are satisfied with our current process since we all satisfied our goals and we have mostly consistent meetings.

Actions to Start Doing

We need to be more consistent with scrum processes, like meetings, burnup charts and sprints. We also need to spend more time testing our code to be sure that it is production ready.

Actions to Keep Doing

The thing that has been working well for us are the team meetings. The meetings help us identify what we can help each other with, and help us avoid doing duplicate work. Meetings are also a chance to learn the new features and clarify questions about the tasks. As we mentioned in the previous sprint report, communication through slack is helpful for keeping the team on track and informed.

Work completed/not completed

Task 1 was to filter submissions based on a start and end date on the dashboard2. This task was completed but still requires testing and final styling.

Task 2 was to create a monthly report that allowed admins to pick a month and see all the submissions made, whether they were free or paid, and the total responses given and how many submissions still needed responses.

Task 3 was to add panels to the dashboard that display the number of new businesses, artists, submissions, responses and whether submissions were free or paid.

Each of these tasks was completed but all need additional testing and styling changes to make them ready for production.

Work completion rate

The total number of user stories completed during the prior sprint was two. As a team we spent 22 ideal working hours working on our tasks. In total we spent our time working on our tasks across 4 days. We completed half a user story per day and worked on average 5 hours each working day. Our cumulative progress has been 30 hours over the course of seven working days which comes out to about 4 work hours per working day.